More About Pamplin Pipes

Readers who read to the end of last week's article on the Pamplin pipes have a little more information "due them" because part of the article was inadvertently omitted.

The section omitted had to do with the finishing of the pipes after they had been molded from native red clay in a metal mold, then set out to dry.

Ken Apschnikat, Appomattox Court House National Parkhistorian, who prepared the material on the pipes concludes the article in this way:

The process of manufacturing pipes at home was quite simple and even the children were allowed to help. Red clay was dug from veins or exceptionally fine deposits of clay not containing large grit. It was mixed sparingly with water to bring the mixture, a smooth dough, to the right consistency. It was then rolled into the shape of rope and cut into specific lengths. The cylinder of clay was placed in the closed mold. The bowl-reamer took inserted and rotated as it was forced down into the mold, therefore shaping the bowl and pushing excess into the shank cavity. With the bowl-reamer in place, the shank-reamer was inserted and rotated completing the configuration of the pipe. The shank-reamer was removed and the mold opened. The pipe was removed from the mold by the bowl-reamer which was still in position. The pipe was smoothed by the hooked- scraper.

After being placed on a board to dry in the sun or in an oven the reamer was freed and removed. A small piece of wire was pushed through the shank cavity and into the bottom of the bowl to provide for drawing of smoke. After drying the pipes they were placed in cast-iron pots which were covered and surrounded by split, seasoned chestnut wood (because it would not smoke) and ignited by fine kindling. The pot was heated until red hot and allowed to cool. They were then coated with beeswax and mutton tallow and then polished, sometimes by the children.

Each pipe was equipped with a reed stem. Native varieties of bamboo or switch cane which grows in swamps and marshes were used. The majority of the later pipes and factory pipe stems (Arundinaria gigantea) came from the Great Dismal Swamp in southeastern Virginia. Stems were dried for 6-8 months and then cut to lengths of about five (5) inches, with one end tapered to fit snugly into the shank cavity. A cork or similar type material was also used to provide a neat fit and serve as a cushion or buffer between stem and clay bowl. Park staff members have used glue to secure stem to shank.

STONEWALL H.D. CLUB

May 1972 -- We had a luncheon meeting with Nellie Kraus and Gloria Gunter on May 12th. with 13 members and 2 visitors present.

For our demonstration on "New Ways to Use Convenience Foods" Lillian Routan did the "Beef Balls and Hash Heidelberg" and Helen Routan did the one on "Grandmothers Strawberry Shortcake'. They were both delicious. We all had different ideas on what we could take or add to them for our own families.

After the delicious luncheon our president, Inez Foster, opened our business session.

Gloria Gunter gave a most interesting devotion on "Clearing our House and our Hearts".

Since the field trip is going to be on our regular meeting time we decided to combine our June and July meetings. It will be with Helen Thomas.

We collected $141 for Pennies For Friendship.

We discussed having a "Stanley Party" in September and a "White Elephant Sale" in October to raise money for the club.

Since there was no other business we were dismissed with our Homemakers Creed and Prayer.

But don't go yet - there's more. Did you ever see a group of ladies dressed for a luncheon meeting lined up around a fish pond on their tummies pulling large rocks out where 2, 3, and 4 year olds three in? Nellie Kraus' fish pond will never be the same. Never underestimate the excitement that goes on at the ladies club meeting.

Well so much for the May Stonewall H. D. Club Meeting.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT NEW HOPE CHURCH

On May 18, you had one of a series of announcements about the Bible School at New Hope on June 12-16. The children will have Preparation Day on June 10, at which time the teachers will enroll them and prepare a picnic for them. The young people will come in to church at 10 a.m. and take care of such activities as registering, getting their books, practicing the music, and taking a brief look at the entire program, after which they will have the pleasure of an appetizing picnic.

The group for special attention this week is the younger children, or those who are from 6 to 8 years old. Mrs. Ruth Drinkard will direct this group with the help of Mrs. Louise Carnefix, Mrs. Ottie Osborne, and Mrs. Judy Taylor. At present they are planning to use three aides; Karen Faye Carter, Betty Garrette and Brenda Goin. They will be using material from "Learning from the Bible" which contains Bible stories and other stories, poems, Bible verses, songs, and pictures. Doesn't this sound exciting?

Mrs. Drinkard and other teachers will be helping the children learn about such Old Testament characters as Nahum, Ruth, Nehemiah, Jeremiah, and Daniel. Special emphasis will be on the Bible study, but the teachers will be touching on some arts and crafts, some games, some music, and of course, they will have some refreshments.

Don't overlook this opportunity to increase your Bible knowledge or to learn more acceptable ways to work and play with others agreeably.

See you next week with the older children.

Hardwood trees sometimes grow so slowly that they do not "pay their way." If there's doubt in your mind, Mr. Landowner, contact your county forester or the Chief Forest Warden.

There's a lot more to the work of the Va. Division of Forestry than merely "fighting fires." The Va. Division, through the Chief Forest Warden and the county forester, offers information & assistance to tree farmers and other land owners.
